More Houses Granted OSC For Veterans Use

Additional housing is gradually becoming available for Oregon State students. Just as this magazine was being printed, the federal housing administration allocated the college 150 housing units of unspecified size and type, and the Corvallis city council has just made application for a hundred additional units. It will be several months before this housing becomes available for use, however, and it will be rented only to veterans according to the present plans.

The housing allocated directly to the college will be set up as dormitory space for unmarried veterans, although some duplex type units may be available for veterans with families. The units will be converted into all-bedroom houses, and a central cafeteria system provided for meals. When the 100 units requested by the city become available, they will be erected on four city-owned blocks and rented to married veterans.

May Purchase USO

Oregon State college has also just been authorized to negotiate the purchase of the Corvallis USO building, located on Fifth and Madison, for use as a women's dormitory beginning spring term. At a special meeting of the Corvallis city council recently, the college's request for the building was favorably considered, and final arrangements are to be made at the next meeting.

In view of the present shortage of living accommodations, the college plans to use this building for three or four years, after which the city will have first priority on its purchase.

HOUSE SIGNS contest, feature of last fall's homecoming, included these life-like entrants from Pi Beta Phi, girls' sorority.

Alumni Open Visitors' Bureau

The Oregon State Alumni association opened a full-fledged visitors' bureau as a part of the alumni office in the Memorial Union building on January 4. This is the first time an office of this kind has been set up on the campus, and it is intended to serve as a headquarters for all campus visitors.

"The main purpose of the visitors' bureau," commented John Fenner, alumni secretary, "is to make campus visitors, whether staters or not, feel welcome, and to make the student body more aware of the alumni association." Telephones, typewriters, stationery and student, faculty, and alumni directories are made available here for visitors.

Posters have been placed on the bulletin boards of all campus buildings to advertise the bureau to both students and visitors. Although it has been opened less than a month, the bureau has already aided many strangers on the campus.

Dear Alum:

Have we missed you in our "Alumni 'Round the World" column? Has the news you sent us about yourself failed to appear in the OREGON STATER? Wartime restriction on paper has prevented us from printing all the class news each month. More paper is becoming available now, and this month we have started a bigger news column about you and your classmates. A few of these items have been held over from the last two issues, but we had no more recent news of you to publish.

We want everyone's name in the OREGON STATER, and from now on we should be able to print it all. So send us some news and PICTURES of yourself and other Oregon Staters. A short letter to us about yourself will replace those dozens of letters you have been planning to write to your old classmates. And if you're short of pictures, send us that favorite of yours and ask that we return it to you. Let's keep track of our family.

REUNION AFTER TOKYO

23 November '46

Beaver-Duck Civil War Highlights Homecoming

Official date for the long-planned homecoming after the war has been set for November 23, 1946, when Oregon Staters gather for REUNION AFTER TOKYO to see the Beavers battle the Ducks in the traditional pigskin civil war.

Plans are underway to provide an old-fashioned homecoming like in the pre-war days when the Rook bonfire, noise parade and walking rally, house signs contest, homecoming queen and her court of campus beauties, alumni banquet and coffee, the Varsity O parade before the game, a midnight show, alumni registration and informal get-togethers, and special open houses in the different living groups on the campus were both routine and traditional. These and other traditional events will help make Reunion After Tokyo in 1946 Oregon State's biggest celebration.

War Restrictions Lifted

Highlighted by the annual football game between OSC and U. of O., REUNION AFTER TOKYO is being planned now to guarantee all former Staters who have been in the armed forces or away from the campus for several years a big homecoming free from all war restrictions and with all of the Beaver spirit.

Returning Staters will also see the Orangemen use a style of football against the University of Oregon slightly different than the conventional single wing formation which has characterized the Beaver gridiron for many years. Coach Lon Stiner has just announced that he plans to combine the T-formation with the single wing for next fall's football battles.

In announcing the date for Reunion After Tokyo, President Strand said that the weekend of the Oregon game was chosen to give to the thousands of returning Staters the caliber of program which would most appeal to them.

"See You at the R.A.T."

Some post-war innovations will be added but Reunion After Tokyo will also feature all of the pre-war homecoming activities, alumni manager Fenner said.

"It's amazing how many of the letters we receive say 'see you at the R. A. T.' so we know that the idea of Reunion After Tokyo has really caught on with Staters who have been scattered during the war years," he added.

Many old time Oregon Staters, who are back on the campus to "finish up" or get an additional degree after periods of absence necessitated by the war, are already making plans toward special functions and get-togethers for the members of their particular class during that homecoming week-end. Although Saturday, November 23, is the date set for the homecoming, the large and varied program being planned and proposed for the Reunion After Tokyo will cover several days before and after that date.

Navy ROTC Plan Proposed For Civilian Students

A plan has been proposed for a navy ROTC program whereby civilian students could receive what will amount to a full scholarship to attend college, according to word received here by President A. L. Strand.

One of 52 colleges in the nation with a Navy ROTC unit, Oregon State would receive a quota from those students who are accepted each year following a nationwide examination given to high school graduates. A total number of students passing the examination would be picked in each region.

Under the proposed plan students would attend college as civilians, would live where they please but would be furnished uniforms for use on certain occasions, would have their fees and tuitions paid and would receive $50 per month toward living expenses.

If this goes through, Oregon State, as one of the 52 colleges chosen to handle naval ROTC, will be getting some 200 highly selected men, although the full quota for any school has not yet been determined.

GROWING PAINS HIT OREGON STATE

Enrollment Doubles

REGISTRATION for winter term was scheduled for January 2 and classes were to begin January 3 but the dates actually marked only the beginning of a series of record-breaking days when enrollment figures for any winter term at Oregon State surpassed all previous figures.

As the registrar's office was jammed with old returning students, new students and men registered under the G. I. bill, the news quickly spread that over 4000 students were expected for enrollment, there were more men than women, the largest freshman class in the history of Oregon State had been registered and the school of engineering had once again regained its position as the largest school on the campus.

531 Old Students

Latest figures available from the registrar's office show that there are 1300 veterans in school now and that 531 of the total 3965 students are classified as "old students returning" which means that they are former Staters who were enrolled during peace time, said D. T. Ordeman, registrar.

Long queues on the fourth, fifth and sixth days after registration day were evidence that for a winter term there were many more than were anticipated. As the registrar's office worked to capacity, the new Veteran's administration office, set up in education hall, also worked overtime to give information, guidance and counseling to all veterans with disabilities coming under the G. I. bill of rights, Public Laws 346 and 16.

More Students Coming

Normally there is a decrease in enrollment winter term, Ordeman said, as he sat thumbing through a high stack of letters requesting information for enrollment spring and fall terms.

Daily he is receiving mail from former students as well as new students who wish to enroll at OSC. As these letters are received, a card is made containing as much information possible to facilitate the load for next registration day, he said.

Houses Are Quickly Occupied

As housing authorities on the campus and in Corvallis scraped the barrel for more living places for students, prefabricated houses were being filled as soon as they were ready for occupancy.

Some students stood in line for a whole day, however, to change their major schools when they could have accomplished the same end by writing their requests by mail or by making the change before the beginning of the new term, he added. All former students who are not enrolled the previous term may make their school changes with nothing more than a written statement that they wish to do so.

In answer to many inquiries about the slow registration for the men and long hours of standing and waiting, Dr. Ordeman explained that approximately 1000 students came into the registrar's office to indicate that they wished to change school, transfer credits from another school or enroll as freshmen without any advance notification.

Ordeman Explains Delay

Normally, he said, the way registration is arranged, there should be no student in the registrar's office on registration day unless he is there by mistake. That is, all records for new enrollees, transfers, etc., should be made before the first day so that all the proper forms and blanks may be completed and filed with the proper school deans.

Fall term, 1942-43, enrolled the largest freshman class, but winter term, 1946, surpassed that total. The three other classes are somewhat dubious about their enrollment status, however, as many of the returning men and women claim the class of '41, '42 or '43 as their own rather than '46, '47 or '49 when they will receive their diplomas.

PREFABRICATED HOUSES — in which 29 OSC students, who are veterans, married, and have children, are now living. BELOW— putting the "halves" together.

ASSEMBLY and construction on the twenty-nine prefabricated houses brought to the campus from the atomic bomb center at Richland, Washington, was completed January 31 and all of the houses are now occupied by married veterans who are attending Oregon State College. This increase in the housing facilities here is relatively small, however, when compared to the large amount of living space needed to care for the greatly increased enrollment, and a critical shortage of housing still exists, according to E. B. Lemon, dean of administration.

Additional Houses Scarce

Plans are now being made to provide additional living quarters which will be ready for occupancy by next September, but no space is immediately available for use during the remainder of the present school year. The college has been trying for several months to purchase additional prefabricated houses that can be set up for use in a short time; however, only twenty-nine such houses have been available for purchase.

These twenty-nine houses purchased by the college are well furnished with an electric stove, large electric refrigerator, and water heater, dining room furniture, a davenport which can be made into a bed, a modern built-in kitchen, bed, and built-in dresser. Most of the houses have but one bedroom, however, seven of the twenty-nine have three bedrooms and two have two bedrooms. The houses were erected on the lots just south of the poultry building, at the end of A street.

$52,000 Project

The project cost the college $52,000, of which the purchase price of $200 to $300 per house was but a small part. Each house was transported from Richland to the campus in sections and by truck, foundations were constructed, sewage, water and electricity were installed, and necessary minor repairs made on each house. Central laundry facilities are now being constructed for the units, and the building of lawns and additional landscaping will continue in the spring.

The money to finance this project was obtained from the educational Endowment fund. It is planned that the rent received from the houses over a period of eight years should pay for the cost of the project, without any profit to the college. On this basis, a figure of $37 a month was set as the rent for the one-bedroom houses, the larger houses renting for $43 and $47 a month. Veterans with children were given preference by the college in renting the houses.

More Married Students Return

In discussing the critical student housing situation here, Mr. Lemon said that the type of housing needed at the college now is considerably different than what was needed before the war. In the first place, more students are returning to school under the aid of the GI bill, especially married students who were unable to return to school without the benefits of this bill.

Jessup Takes New Job, "Cop" Wells Retires

MRS. LORNA C. JESSUP, assistant dean of women at Oregon State since 1927, resigned in January to accept the position of dean of women at Arizona State college at Flagstaff and J. D. (Johnny) Wells, Oregon State's "campus cop" for 29 years, retired last month to lead a life of fishing and resting. His successor is William (Bill) M. Harper who has been sheriff of Benton county for the past 11 years.

Mrs. Jessup was a member of the Arizona State home economics staff for four years after her graduation from Oregon State college in 1923 and during that time was advanced to head of the home economics department.

In 1927 she returned to Oregon State upon the invitation of Dean Kate W. Jamison to become assistant dean of women. Twice she served as acting dean, once when Dean Jamison was on leave of absence for a trip to China. More recently, she served when Dean Buena Maris was in the war activity program at Hanford, Wash.

Mrs. Jessup was responsible for the development of the Women's cooperative houses which now total seven and it was under her supervision that fraternity houses as dormitory annexes were first used for women.

During the period of the war when the college was faced with one of the heaviest emergency housing situations in its history, Mrs. Jessup had the responsibility of meeting the peak and utilizing all of the dormitories on the campus.

"Cop" Johnny Wells retired at the age of 78 after 29 years of directing traffic, tracing petty thievery and tackling parking problems. He became "campus cop" during the administration of Dr. William J. Kerr, college president, and was a familiar sight directing traffic at football games and other large campus functions.

He began his career in 1904 on the Corvallis police force and was for 12 years chief of the city police. He is married and has four married daughters, two of whom are Oregon State graduates.

Wells plans to keep his home in Corvallis and occasionally visit his cabin at Waldport. An ardent fisherman, he won the Salmon Derby at Waldport last year.

"Bill" Harper, who replaced Wells as head of campus police, has been a resident of Corvallis since 1905 and knows the campus well.

"I am very happy to be a member of the Beaver family and will give honest and courteous service to our students and faculty. I am sure that with cooperation, my office will continue to keep up the high standards of the college," he said.

Campus traffic and parking problems will claim most of his attention at first because of the increase in registration and number of cars on the campus.

VETERANS' OFFICE, just opened in Education Hall, assists many veterans in obtaining educational and vocational rehabilitation, particularly at Oregon State. Seated at desk is Kenneth H. Baker, '33, office head.

Alum Heads New Office For Veteran Education

To keep pace with the steadily increasing enrollment of veterans at Oregon State, the Veterans Administration, in conjunction with the college, has set up a branch Regional Veterans Administration office and Vocational Guidance center on the campus, headed by Lt. Col. Kenneth H. Baker, '33, and Dr. R. R. Reichart, associate professor of educational psychology. The new office, located in the Educational hall (old Chem Shack), started right to work on registration day of winter term, by interviewing and orienting some 400 veterans who desire to enroll at Oregon State under the benefits of the G I Bill of Rights.

Col. Baker, or rather "Mister" Baker since his release from duty December 27, 1945, and his staff not only determine the veterans' eligibility for educational benefits under the G I Bill, but by interviews and vocational aptitude tests, assist the veteran in choosing the field of study, training or rehabilitation for which he is best suited.

"Our only function," Baker indicated, "is to assist veterans in obtaining the education or vocational rehabilitation they desire and are entitled to. This may include colleges or universities, high school, trade and vocational schools, and apprenticeship or on-the-job training in any field and at practically any school."

To assist the veterans in choosing their field of work, the Guidance center, under the direction of Dr. Reichart, gives all veterans who desire it, free vocational placement advice. By this means, psychometric labs and aptitude testing facilities are made available to all veterans.

Baker graduated in agriculture at OSC, in 1933, and the same year was commissioned a second lieutenant in artillery from the college ROTC, after holding the honorary title of cadet lieutenant colonel. He spent the next four years as an educational advisor officer with the CCC. In September of 1940, he entered on active duty in the armed forces with the 349th FA Regiment (later converted to a separate battalion) at Ft. Sill, Oklahoma. Baker remained with this unit, serving as battalion commander from 1942 until he left it in Germany in June.

OREGON STATE'S CAMPUS...

By John
Burtner

Fire Chief Percy Tallman is worrying over how many are occupying basements and attics under hazardous conditions, but some are willing to take chances.

Why So Crowded

Time and again the question is asked, "Why are you so crowded now with around 4000 when you once took care of more than 4700?" The answer is easy, even if not easy to get over. In the first place, the 4700 had the campus and town crowded to what was then considered the limit. BUT, at that time more than 2000 students found living quarters downtown. Last fall less than 800 could find such places, because most of the old boarding houses had been converted into apartments already filled up with the war-swelled Corvallis population. Just a lot of folks who came here for a few months decided to stay.

One-third Are Married

Of course those apartments, and many more too, are needed also because so many of the veterans are married. No exact figures are available yet, but it is estimated that about a third of the vets are married, many with children. That means that for about 400 of the students housing has to be provided for about 1000 persons. It makes a difference.

Much of this situation was foreseen by the administration, though little or nothing could be done about it. The speed of the return of vets in large numbers this term was somewhat of a surprise, but even had this been accurately known, nothing more could have been done except possibly to have been prepared better in the registrar's office to handle the unprecedented rush there. Additional housing couldn't be had in advance at any price.

Veterans Get Preference

Some veterans have moved into the 29 prefabricated houses trucked here from the Handford project. These have been put up on college property south of the poultry building across the railroad track. They are neat, comfortable little houses, but make just a trickle as compared with the number needed. They are a start, however, and application has been made for hundreds more, not quite so good, from the Vancouver area. You may be sure that no possibility is being overlooked, from trailers to quanset huts or abandoned quarters at the airport south of town.

Speaking of the airport calls to mind an important addition to the offerings of the school of engineering. This is a two-year sequence of courses in airplane ground school and flight training. The college has contracted with the

A COLLEGE, like a home, has an enduring quality not given to many other institutions. This enduring quality may be carried to unchanging extremes, to be sure, but it is a quality none the less which makes the campus a second "home" to the thousands who have spent important years there.

One of the returned veterans, back from several years in Europe, was asked the other day what he found about the campus that was most changed since he left. He thought a bit, then said, "Well, I can't think of anything important that has changed; it seems just about like it was when I left, except that the uniforms already so numerous then are about gone now."

In other words, this veteran saw the campus now as more normal than it was when he left, and he seemed to be glad of it.

This bit of introduction to this campus column that the editor has requested is merely to indicate that we believe you still consider this campus as part of your "home" and that you will be interested in some of the things happening here. Some of these events will be new, in a way, but many will be but variations of the things you remember and took part in.

Veterans here, there and everywhere! Yes, the uniforms are gone, except for those worn by the men in the navy ROTC—and of course the blue-lapelled kahki of the army ROTC—but they are fully replaced by those who have doffed their uniforms and returned with a rush to take up or complete their education.

Rook Colonels!!

Latest reports show more than 1300 veterans now enrolled under the two federal aid bills, with a considerable number more not yet receiving aid because they are still on terminal leave. A large proportion of the men back are officers. We haven't checked up exactly, but report is that we even have lieutenant colonels in the freshman class!

That freshman class, by the way, at 1956, is the largest in the history of Oregon State. Even at the height of pre-war enrollment when the total student body exceeded 4700 in the fall term, the freshman class was only a little more than 1700. Think what this means to the size of the total student body a few years hence!

Packed 'em In

How much it will mean depends, of course, on whether we manage to find a place to "eat and sleep" those who want to come. The present enrollment of 3965 is already at least 300 greater than any of the college officials thought could be squeezed in the available space, but here they are.

Bids Readvertised For Women's Dorm

Since this column was written, a meeting of the state board of higher education discovered that, through an error by the architects, bidders on the women's dormitory project had not submitted pre-qualification certificates, therefore the bids have to be readvertised. Arrangements have been made to award the contracts at the time the bids are opened to minimize any further delay. As now scheduled, both the advertisement for bids and for sale of the bond issue will be conducted in the four weeks preceding February 18 when both types of bids will be opened.

Sports Roundup...

OUR once conference leading basketball team forgot to take their horseshoes last week when they made the Inland road trip to play the University of Idaho and Washington State, and came home with "bloody noses." Besides losing three out of the four games and slipping back into the second-place spot in the conference standings, one car load of the Beavers was involved in an auto accident near Newberg, Oregon, Wednesday, January 30; and Glen Warren, regular 6 foot, 6 inch forward, received bad cuts on his knee and forehead.

Trainers Vern Eilers and Johnny Moore, reserve guard, were also injured slightly in the accident, but were not kept in the hospital. Warren, however, probably will not be able to play in the next series of games with the University of Washington.

Inability to hit the basket was probably the chief factor in the Stater's three out of four losses in the Palouse country. During the first five conference battles, the Beavers posted a scoring average of 50.6 points per game. On the road trip, however, that average slumped to 37.9 points. Oregon State lost to Idaho by scores of 42 to 37 and 43 to 38; won the first contest with WSC 50 to 48, but dropped the second game, 47-34.

The postwar return to sports at Oregon State rolled into high gear with the start of winter term and will reach a peak next spring when the Beavers will be back on a normal basis in intercollegiate athletics. . . . First sport to be revived, of course, was football last fall with Lon Stiner turning in a remarkable coaching job. With only one letterman on hand and a squad made up almost entirely of freshmen, Lon piloted the Orange to a fourth place finish in the tough Pacific Coast conference including two wins over arch rival Oregon.

Swimming and freshman basketball made a reappearance on the campus sports scene winter term. In the spring Oregon State will field teams in track, baseball, golf and tennis and play a complete schedule against northern division competition in all four sports. . . . Coach Ed Stevens even plans to revive crew racing on the Willamette at least on an informal basis and is already busy getting the boat houses and racing shells in good shape.

After a two-year layoff caused by the war, Oregon State is returning to swimming competition with Reg Flood, former Beaver swimming ace, as the new coach. Flood has had to start from scratch as not a single letterman or even a man with any former college experience turned out for the squad. However, the Beaver tank boss figures that the mermen will have to get started some time and this winter is as good or better than any other time. . . .

Although the 20-man swimming squad is definitely of unknown quality, enthusiasm is high and the men show a willingness to learn that should pay off dividends later. . . . Dual meets are scheduled with all the northern division schools and the league championships will be held in the Corvallis pool on February 23.

Frank Mandic, all-northern division forward on the 1940 northern division champion Oregon State basketball team, is coaching the Beavers' first Rook hoop team since the 1943 season. . . . A 12-game schedule has been arranged for the Beaver Babes with the possibility of two or three more contests being scheduled. . . . Four "little civil war" battles against the Oregon Frosh highlight the schedule that includes mostly games against strong high school clubs all over the western part of the state.

Some of the most promising first year basket shooters are Bud Gibbs, forward from Hood River; Wade, 6 foot, 5 inch center from Coos Bay; Bob Hawes, guard from Pendleton; and Chuck Sauvain, forward from Woodburn. . . . Not to be forgotten when speaking of the freshmen are the yearlings on Slats Gill's varsity squad, Cliff Crandall, Ron Esping, Jerry Krafve and Ernie Neal.

While speaking of basketball we should point out the great difference the return of service veterans winter term has made in the 1945-46 Orange hoop machine. . . . Glen Warren, 6 foot, 6 inch two-year letterman forward; Erland Anderson, 6 foot, 4 inch junior forward; and Cliff Crandall, flashy freshman guard from Astoria, have made the Beavers a formidable quintet of prewar caliber. . . . These men joined the squad midway through fall term but were ineligible to compete against outside competition until they registered for winter quarter. . . . This ruling prevented Gill from using these men on the eastern road trip, results of which might have been quite different had this trio been on hand.

Another familiar sports event due for revival winter term is Jim Dixon's novice boxing tournament. . . . The

Orangemen Take Lead As Hoop Series Opens

Oregon State's strong basketball team got off to a good start in the 1946 Northern division campaign by winning four of its first five conference starts. Only loss was to the defending champion Oregon Webfoots but the Beavers offset this by whipping the Ducks twice on their home floor.

Coach Slat's Gill's men swept a two-game series with an unusually strong University of Idaho quintet, 49-40 and 49-45, in the season's openers at Corvallis January 4 and 5. The first night the Orangemen ran up a 26 to 16 lead in the first half and then coasted the rest of the way. Forward Erland Anderson celebrated his return to the squad after three years of service in the army by taking high point honors with 13. Forward Glen Warren, a returned air corps veteran, also grabbed some of the limelight by sinking eight out of nine free throw attempts.

Vandals Put Up Stiff Fight

The scrappy Vandals put up a much stiffer fight the next night before finally succumbing to Orange power. The lead changed hands 16 times in the first half with the Beavers pulling into a 26-20 lead at intermission. With four minutes left in the game Oregon State held what looked like a safe 45-37 lead and Gill sent in his second team. The Vandals immediately started a last-ditch rally and pulled within two points of the Orange at 47-45 with 45 seconds left in the game. At this point Warren potted a field goal to clinch the contest. Leading Beaver point maker was Cliff Crandall, flashy freshman guard from Astoria, with 13.

On January 12 the Beavers traveled to Eugene for the first game of the season against arch rival Oregon. Gill's men started out at a blistering pace that swept the surprised Ducks off their feet. By half time the count favored the Orange clad hoopsters, 33-17, and it looked like a rout. But the Webfoots weren't through. They came back with determination and completely reversed the procedure in the second period. While holding the Beavers to 17 points, Oregon ran up 30 but couldn't quite close the big gap and the game ended 50 to 47 in favor of Oregon State. Guards Cliff Crandall and Bernie McGrath were high for O.S.C. with nine apiece.

Oregon Wins in Overtime

The following Friday night, January 18, the Webfoots invaded Corvallis for the second intra-state clash. Another torrid contest resulted in which a total of 47 fouls were tooted and an overtime was necessary to produce a winner. The regular playing period ended with the score knotted at 45-all. Soon after the overtime got underway Oregon

Alumni May Talk To Athletes But....

IF YOU have heard about the so-called liberalizing amendments to the Pacific Coast conference's "purity code" on the interviewing and entertainment of prospective students who are athletes, don't take the term "liberalizing" too seriously. Under the new rules, an alumnus MAY interview prospective students, whether athletes or not. If this prospective student happens to be an athlete, however, the alum may NOT entertain the student nor enthusiastically persuade him to attend Oregon State.

Just what the alumni may do in spreading the Beaver Spirit among high school graduates and other prospective students is not pointed out or even hinted by the conference. A bulletin from Victor Schmidt, the conference commissioner, however, very clearly points out what the alumni can NOT do in a summarization of the conference rules.

Little Change Made

These "liberalized" rules do not change the existing rules controlling interviews by coaches, athletic officials, and secretaries or other employees of alumni associations. Moreover, the "liberalization" is for a trial period only, and will not extend beyond June 30, 1947 except by affirmative action of the conference.

Alumni May Not . . .

The conference bulletin is as follows:

"Alumni MAY interview prospective students, whether athletes or not, subject to the following restrictions:

1. Alumni may NOT engage in persistent, repeated or offensive efforts to induce students with athletic ability to attend a particular institution.
2. Alumni may NOT entertain prospective students who are athletes."

According to the conference, "Entertainment includes meals, theater parties, banquets, outings, excursions, trips to visit college campuses, admissions to athletic events and similar activities designed to influence or induce such athletes to attend a particular institution."

"3. Alumni may NOT offer or promise any prospective student who is an athlete any inducement of financial value to influence or induce such athlete to attend a particular institution.

No Financial Inducements

"Inducements of financial value include offers or promises of employment, sponsorships, loans, tuition, fees, grants-in-aid, so-called athletic scholarships, board or lodging, books, employment opportunities or connections after graduation and similar inducements. Any inducements to members of the athlete's family or to others for the purpose of influencing or inducing the athlete to attend a particular institution are likewise prohibited.

* * *

"In addition to the restrictions on interviewing governing alumni generally, secretaries and other employees of alumni associations MAY interview high school or junior college athletes ONLY on the campus of the member institution. Furthermore, secretaries and other employees of alumni associations may NOT initiate correspondence with high school or junior college athletes, although they MAY respond to correspondence initiated by such athletes."

Students are governed by the same rules as alumni, in connection with interviewing.

"Coaches may interview prospective student athletes only within the limits of the coaches' own campuses."

"Coaches may not initiate correspondence with high school or junior college athletes for recruiting purposes, but may respond to correspondence initiated by such athletes."

Further, "Coaches may NOT visit the campus of any high school or junior college except

1. To make an address at the invitation of the principal or superintendent, or
2. To officiate in an athletic contest, or
3. When their presence is necessitated by the participation of their team in an athletic contest.

Registrars Believed Honest

"Registrars, directors of admissions, field agents or other representatives of the non-athletic interest of a member institution, whose assigned duties include contacts with prospective students, may, in the line of their duties, interview prospective college students, whether athletes or not."

In permitting the entertainment of prospective student athletes, the conference prohibits such entertainment by coaches, athletic officials, registrars and field agents, except:

1. They may entertain high school or junior college athletes on the member institution's own campus, if they are present on the campus of the member institution to compete with one of its teams, or to participate in an inter-scholastic meet or tournament.
2. They may entertain groups of high school or junior college students on the member institution's own campus, provided the groups entertained are chosen on the basis of some interest other than athletics.
3. They may furnish complimentary admissions to athletic contests on the campus to groups described above in 1 and 2 while they are such guests of the member institution.
4. They may show the campus to prospective students who are visitors on the campus and may furnish such prospective students with ordinary meals or a night's lodging on or adjacent to the campus.

POSTED

MANY of you have been able to drop into the alumni office during the past two months. I've really enjoyed the visits. Maybe this column will serve as a chat on paper for those of you who are too far away or too busy to visit the campus. It won't be formal because I guess I'm just not very formal, and I hope that you will read and comment whether you agree or disagree.

Perhaps you've noticed the changes we've made in THE OREGON STATER. (We being Editor Howard Cornutt and I). We've made these changes in response to your requests for an even more personal, lively, readable magazine. We're not satisfied yet, but we're working toward that goal.

If you're planning a trip to Alaska, be sure to look up HOPEWELL and CLARENCE RANDS, '24. The Rands really qualify as sourdoughs having been in the Territory for twelve years. Daughter Althea Rands, '44, is now in Ketchikan, Alaska, in partnership with her parents in the Rands Flower and Music Shop. Now read carefully Staters—the Rands say, "We would enjoy very much showing any Oregon Stater who might be making the boat trip to Alaska our many interesting sights in either Ketchikan or Sitka." Address: Clarence R. Rands Co., Sitka, Alaska.

Had a chuckle out of a letter from Wave Lt (jg) WANDA THORESON, '43, who says, "Having just completed a year and one month's service on a lonely Pacific island, I feel qualified as a veteran of the wars to write and tell you about the Battle of Mare Island. We on Mare Island have not heard the roar of guns, the zooming planes, nor have we seen the ravages which war has brought to many countries. We are the paper navy and have fought our war with eleven (11)—or is it thirteen (13)—carbon copies. Seriously, being in the navy has been a great experience and gives me a certain satisfaction in feeling that perhaps in a small way I have helped out."

Seriously yourself, Wanda, the rest of us know that all you Stater women who were in the service did help out and not in a small way either.

* * *

One of our best correspondents, MARGARET BLAUVELT ESTES, '43, has stuffed her marine uniform with mothballs. Husband, Captain Don, returned from Europe in January. Margaret visited KAY GOUL FARMER, '43, while in Long Island, N. Y., and recently saw JEAN RIST, '43, in Sacramento, and MARGARET SULLIVAN, '44, who is in Pasadena.

Just received a plea from the Registrar's office to tell you to be sure to write his office prior to registering. This applies to veterans and to non-veterans, and a letter to him can save you lots of time.

Another Stater traveling these days is HULDA E. GUILD, '98, who has been visiting around Boston. While there Mrs. Guild met Miss GENEVIEVE LYFORD, '99, and they had a rather well integrated program in that they attended services in the old Paul Revere church, went once to Trinity Church and also saw a matinee of "The Day Before Spring."

* * *

Should Oregon State have a memorial of some type to commemorate the World War II contribution of Staters? If the answer is yes, what type of a memorial do you feel would be the most appropriate?

What should it be? Some folks want a sports pavilion, an auditorium, a theater, a new stadium, a chapel. Then there's the possibility of an extension on the Memorial Union building, a scientific research foundation, or a scholarship foundation. What's your opinion? This will be one of the subjects discussed by your alumni board of directors at their meeting February 16.

Turn about is fair play, they say (who "they" is remains a mystery). So, if you've enjoyed reading about your Stater friends in the Oregon Stater, don't forget that they enjoy reading about you. Moral is—send in a spot of news from time to time.

Another interesting problem to be aired at the next alumni board of director's meeting is the question of alumni clubs. Should the association start and maintain active alumni clubs throughout Oregon and larger out-of-state towns? Or is it better to have annual or semi-annual get-togethers when there is a definite planned program. Be thinking about the comparative benefits of these two methods of maintaining Oregon State interest in your town and we'll discuss them at length in a later issue.

Two near-Staters we're looking forward to meeting are Mrs. Bill Christy and Mrs. Gordon Sitton. BILL CHRISTY, '42, met Mrs. Bill in England and through a special authorization from Gen. Georgie Patton was able to return in July to make her Mrs. Christy. GORDON SITTON, '40, met Mrs. Gordon "down under" and is now waiting impatiently for his Australian bride.

A note from BEN OLSEN, '11, from Indianapolis, Indiana, says, ". . . these here Hoosiers hain't got me down yet after struggling with them for 15 years—purty good folks even if they beat the pants off our basketball team when they travel back in these parts. My hair is thin and gray—sort of like E. B. Lemon's, a classmate.

"I hear from "RED" CARLSON, '11 (an Army Col. located at the U. of Tennessee) frequently. Red still has his old sense of humor and the two of us acknowledge that we are the best preserved specimens left in our old class of 1911. For a fee, we will tell the rest of the old buzzards how to stay young."

Oregon State is trying to buy the Corvallis USO center, (former Madison Street Methodist church) for use as a temporary girls' dormitory.

Student Executive Council Proposes College Pavilion For World War II Memorial

Student action on a World War II memorial was stimulated last week toward a sports pavilion when the student executive council drew up a concrete proposal, for student consideration, favoring the construction of such a memorial instead of a college chapel. The pavilion proposal is as follows:

1. That plans for an appropriate memorial to Oregon State students who gave their lives in World War II be formulated as soon as possible.

Student Center Needed

2. That a building especially designed as a student pavilion or a student activity center properly located on the Oregon State campus would be an appropriate memorial to those men.

3. That there is a definite need for immediate action to formulate plans and to construct such a building on the campus at Oregon State college to provide adequately for the student activity program.

To Seat 10,000

4. That the plans for such a building should include stage, floor and seating accommodations for the following:

- (a) A basketball court with a minimum seating capacity for 10,000 people.
- (b) All the activities sponsored by the educational activities board and student affairs committee such as concert series, programs, stunt shows, student dances, band, orchestra, Glee and Madrigal club programs, forensic contests, etc.
- (c) Associated student meetings, convocations, commencement exercises, 4-H club and Future Farmer gatherings and many other conventions held on the campus which require a large auditorium.

Intramural Center

(d) Intramural athletics and such other campus activities that could be coordinated in a program of events scheduled in the building throughout the year.

(e) Registration and payment of fees by students on registration days.

5. That a study of possible methods of financing the construction of the building be made immediately with the suggestion that some thought be given to the following:

- (a) A canvass of alumni and friends for gifts and donations.
- (b) Student participation either by voluntary contribution each quarter or by a fixed assessment to be determined and voted by the Associated Students of Oregon State college.

Request State Funds

(c) A request for a specific appropriation of State funds.

(d) Yearly contributions to be made from intercollegiate athletic and educational activity funds.

6. That all students and alumni unite in an effort to secure immediate administrative cooperation and support for such a memorial to be constructed on our campus so as to provide adequately for automobile parking, with the request that actual construction be postponed until an adequate building can be constructed.

Following submission of this proposal, a general assembly was called by the council and more detailed plans were outlined.

It was pointed out that with this building located between Ninth and Eleventh streets there would be no interference with ROTC training grounds and would provide adequate parking space around the building and up side avenues. The student speakers bureau is now conducting a poll among living groups to obtain student opinion.

Beaver Sports Roundup

all-school championships will be held towards the end of the term and trophies will be awarded the winners in each weight event. . . . Dixon expects this tourney to supply him with men for next year's varsity boxing team.

Baseball Coach Ralph "Coley" Coleman and Track Mentor Grant "Doc" Swan are already laying the groundwork for the return of these two sports to Oregon State's major sports agenda next spring. . . . "Coley" has over 20 candidates for pitchers and catchers working out three times a week in the men's gym.

Baseball Prospects Wanted

"Coley" is also hoping to uncover some prize pitching prospects in these early workouts. . . . So far only one baseball letterman is in school but a few more may get back for spring term. The lone letterman on hand at present is Don Bower, hard hitting second baseman who played a leading role in bringing the Beavers a tie with Oregon for the northern division championship in 1943, the last year the Orange fielded a team.

* * *

Swan is slightly better off when it comes to lettermen. . . . He has four letter winners back in school but the only hitch in this is that all four are weight men with not a single letterman runner back. . . . Returning cinder veterans are Bob Stevens, defending northern division shotput champion; Bill Blackledge, who will try a comeback as a shotputter and discus thrower after five years of duty in the navy; Marlyn Waarvick, javelin thrower; and Bob Reiman (Oregon State's first three-sport letter winner since Don Durdan), a shotputter and discus thrower. . . .

Blond Al, a four-sport star in his undergraduate days at Colorado college, was head coach at Monmouth's Oregon College of Education for nine years before the war forced the normal school to drop sports for the duration. . . . Cox is 44 years old, married and has one child. . . . He holds a master's degree from Oregon State.

The Pacific Coast conference voted at its December meeting to return to round-robin competition in football next fall. . . . Oregon State will meet every team in the conference except Montana and has one of its best schedules in history. . . . Two of the big California schools, Stanford and Southern California, come north to play the Orange with USC slated for Portland and Stanford at Corvallis. . . .

In addition to eight conference contests, the Stinermen will play Portland university at Corvallis. . . . The Pilots are coached by Hal Moe who was backfield coach at Oregon State before the war. . . . Oregon State's complete schedule is

Sept. 28—UCLA at Los Angeles;

Oct. 5—Portland university at Corvallis; Oct. 12—USC at Portland; Oct. 18—Open; Oct. 26—Washington State at Pullman; Nov. 2—Stanford at Portland; Nov. 9—Idaho at Corvallis; Nov. 16—California at Berkeley; Nov. 23—Oregon at Corvallis; Nov. 30—Washington at Portland

Dick Lorenz, brilliant sophomore left end, was named winner of the Otto Sitton award as the outstanding Oregon State lineman for the 1945 season. . . . The selection, which was made by the coaches of the Beavers' opponents last season, was announced by Earl Heckart, Corvallis businessman and chairman of the award committee. . . . Lorenz will have his name engraved on the Sitton Memorial plaque, a bronze tablet given to the college by the class of 1912. . . . He is the fifth recipient of the honor and the first end to be named.

Modified "T" Formation To Highlight Spring Drill For Oregon State Grid Team

When the Beaver football boss, Lon Stiner, rounds up all of his gridders for the opening of spring practice on April 2, he will present them with a combination of their regular single wing formation and the popular "T" formation as a basis for next fall's grid wars.

Because of this slight change in system, Stiner indicated that spring practice would be particularly important to the Orangemen this year. Conference rules, however, limit the spring practices to only 30 sessions. Stiner, who has just returned from the annual conference of the American Association of Football Coaches in St. Louis, revealed that he had planned to use the combined T-formation last fall, but because of the lack of experienced players in the lineup, he decided to postpone the change a year.

Just how many experienced gridders will be on hand for the spring workouts is not known, since some of last fall's regulars are being taken into the service while a few prewar letter winners are expected to return to school.

Student Housing Becomes Critical

Secondly, during the five-year period of the war, limitations on the procurement of building materials prevented the construction of housing facilities. In that same period, many students were forced to leave school temporarily. Many of these old students have been married since leaving school. Now they are returning to school. It is estimated that some 450 married students are now attending Oregon State. This makes housing accommodations for married students much in demand.

Lemon further pointed out that many of the pre-war boarding houses in Corvallis have been converted into apartments to meet the growing demand for such accommodations. A boarding house which formerly housed ten to fifteen men students, will now accommodate only three or four married students. Although the military installations in the vicinity of Corvallis are gradually being closed down—Camp Adair and Corvallis Air base—many families connected with these camps are still living in Corvallis.

Extensive plans are being made to provide additional housing facilities that will be ready for use next September. Bids have already been let for the construction of a new women's dormitory to house over 300 girls, and to be completed in September. Plans also include the construction of an additional prefabricated house unit, similar to the one just completed, which will house about 500 men. These houses would be converted into all-bedroom accommodations and located around a central cafeteria.

ADAMS, '30, assistant state supervisor of the emergency farm labor program in the Oregon State college extension service, was the only state representative from west of Minnesota at a conference in Washington, D. C., in January with federal farm labor officials concerning the farm labor youth program for 1946. ARTHUR M. WOODCOCK, '29, and Esten Winegar have purchased the entire properties of the Corvallis Brick and Tile company which include 10 acres of plant ground and equipment. Offices will be maintained at the plant. ROBERT D. HUTCHINSON, '28, is raising registered Hereford cattle and farming wheat in Warner, Alberta.

Any student may take the course who passes the physical examination—and who pays the $80 per term special fee. Veterans will be able to get at least two terms cost per year out of the amount left over in the $500 allowed for fees and tuition. The program is arranged to be more than merely training for commercial pilots or private fliers. These will in reality be service courses to help students in any technical field to adapt the "air age" to their own profession. Students in agriculture and forestry are especially concerned with this phase.
