FACTS ABOUT OREGON STATE UNIVERSITY

Now in its 117th year, Oregon State University ranks as one of the leading educational and research centers in the nation. And it will enter 1985 with a new leader as Dr. John Byrne takes over as the 14th president of the university, replacing Dr. Robert MacVicar who retired after 14 years of service.

It is Oregon's oldest state-supported institution of higher learning, using Oct. 27, 1868 as its charter day.

It is one of only a dozen U.S. universities that are both Land Grant and Sea Grant institutions, charged with helping spearhead the wise development of land and sea resources.

Students come from almost every community in Oregon, from every state in the U.S., and from about 75 other countries.

From an initial class of three (one woman and two men) in 1870, OSU has grown student-wise to the point that it now confers more than 3,300 degrees each June. Enrollment exceeds 17,000.

The campus is more than 400 acres. Classroom buildings, the library and the Memorial Union (student center) make up the heart of the campus. The outer circle is made up of residence halls and research buildings.

All told there are more than 100 major buildings on the campus that has drawn high praise for its organization and beauty. Thousands of trees and selected shrubs reflect the grandeur of the Northwest.

The College of Science and the College of Liberal Arts are the core academic units of the university. The schools include Agriculture, Business, Education, Engineering, Forestry, Health and Physical Education, Home Economics, Oceanography, Pharmacy and Veterinary Medicine.

Engineering and Business have made the greatest growth in recent years. The School of Veterinary Medicine is the newest.

About one out of every six students is in the Graduate School, working for a master's or doctor's degree. Bachelor's degrees are offered in about 150 fields; master's in 100; doctorates in more than 50. The nationally-rated scientific and technical fields of the university are attracting large numbers of females.

OSU provides the research base for Oregon's two largest industries: forestry and agriculture. Its accomplishments in energy, food and environmental sciences have drawn national attention.

GILL COLISEUM—Home of the OSU Beaver Gymnasts

Gill Coliseum has taken on a more versatile role as an athletic facility. Not only is it a basketball "showplace," but it's the home of the Beaver gymnasts, too.

The first home gymnastics meet was held at Gill Coliseum in 1977 against the University of Nevada-Reno before a crowd of 800. Since that time, gymnastic crowds have grown to an average 2,500 spectators per meet. Last year, more than 10,000 people saw six different gymnastic events at Gill Coliseum. A 1984-85 rennovation added improved seating and a modern look to Gill.

Named after the late Slats Gill, who was head basketball coach at OSU for 36 years, the building is an excellent facility, spanning one and one-third acres. The peak of the building is 83 feet above the floor, equivalent to a four-story building. Attendance capacity is 10,400.

Reaching capacity crowds is still a goal for the future of women's gymnastics, but as many as 5,000 spectators have viewed gymnastics at a single event.

The 14th president of Oregon State University is John V. Byrne, who succeeded Robert W. MacVicar following his retirement in November of 1984.

Byrne, 57, is a former vice president for research and graduate studies at Oregon State. He spent 21 years at OSU before he was nominated by President Reagan in 1981 to head the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The U.S. Senate confirmed his appointment and Byrne served as NOAA Administrator for three years.

The new OSU president has also been U.S. Commissioner to the International Whaling Commission and was a member of advisory panels for the National Science Foundation, and the Departments of Agriculture, Interior, State, Commerce and Defense.

Born May 9, 1928, in Hempstead, N.Y., Byrne is a graduate of Hamilton College in New York. Under his direction, Marshall's athletic program made tremendous strides. Among his accomplishments were doubling the athletic budget in six years, while state support was cut in half. Major improvements in academics were also made during his tenure at Marshall.

The Marshall athletic program blossomed at the same time. Berths in the NCAA basketball championships his last years, the first winning football season in 19 years and school record attendance figures in basketball and football are among his major achievements.

Marshall also received several facility improvements with Snyder at the helm, including a new basketball arena, a new baseball facility and a new training table facility.

1985-86 Outlook

Beavers seek depth for successful season

For first year Oregon State gymnastics coach Jim Turpin, it's the old good news-bad news story.

The good news is that he inherits four proven all-arounds, who helped lead the Beavers to a sixth place finish at the NCAA National Championships a year ago. The bad news is that since the Beavers began pre-season workouts, OSU has not had a full team of gymnasts healthy to workout together.

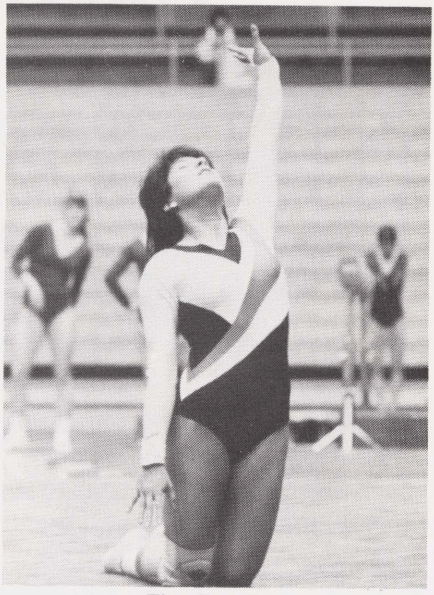
While Turpin needs the time to mold his five new freshmen together with the talented returning team members, sickness and injury have hampered the team's gym time. It is a problem that Turpin doesn't like and one that he is hoping will have itself cleared up by the time OSU opens its 1986 season at home Jan. 4 against Washington State.

"The nagging injuries have been frustrating," noted Turpin. "All of the freshmen came in with little hurts and until we get healthy we can't expect too much. When we have some healthy bodies we certainly have excellent potential as a team and good depth."

Depth is a necessity for the Beavers, who must replace a couple of pretty valuable point producers in All-American Heidi Anderson and four-year letter winner Jayne Weinstein, both lost to graduation. The five new freshmen are expected to help take up the slack in the lineup left by their departure.

Those rookies will have to blend in with some impressive returning gymnasts, who will be the Beaver leaders for 1986. The lone OSU senior, Michelle Gabiola, will carry much of the leadership role. She is coming off a banner junior year that saw her place 13th all-around at nationals, win the NorPac all-around title and earn a spot on the U.S. Team for the World University Games over the summer. Gabiola is the school record holder on floor (tied with Anderson at 9.7) and ranks among the Top 10 for the Beavers on bars and in vaulting as well. She had a season best of 37.40 in all-around last year and is expected to be the top Beaver all-arounder for her senior season.

"Gabby is very good, there's no doubt about that," smiled Turpin. "She's one of the hardest workers I've ever been associated with and I think she's ready to have an outstanding senior year."



Tina Barnes

Gabiola will be pushed for certain. Tina Barnes, an All-American for the Beavers as a freshman a year ago, is the top returning all-around scorer for OSU. She hit 37.45 as a rookie and went on to capture fourth place in vault at nationals. Along with two other top sophomores, Debbie Marland and Carol Schroeder, Barnes gives Turpin three of the finest second year gymnasts around. Marland had a season best of 36.85 and Schroeder hit 36.40 as a freshman.

Barnes naturally will lead OSU in vaulting and with Gabiola gives OSU a top one-two punch in that event. Barnes' 9.65 vault last year was the second best in Beaver history and Gabiola owns five of OSU's Top 10 scores in that event. Gabiola leads OSU on bars, where she has one of the toughest routines in the nation, and that event could be the strongest for OSU according to Turpin.

"That may be a surprise but right now we are looking very solid on bars," said the coach. "Everyone seems to have a strong routine for us there. At least right now."

Barnes and freshman Monique Munson help make the bars strong for the Beavers. Munson "swings as well as anyone" noted Turpin.

Beam and floor are coming along according to the coaching staff but OSU is going to have to heal its hurts to be competitive there. Marland and Gabiola are top floor performers and Marland and Barnes were consistently at 9.5 or better on beam a year ago for OSU.

Depth will be the key in all events. Turpin feels he has five strong in each event but needs numbers to keep OSU successful all season long. Junior Jill Bumford could supply the needed experience and depth, particularly on floor and beam where she did most of her work last year.

Still, the freshmen will have to produce if the Beavers are to stay competitive with the national powers. Munson is the prize and with Gabiola, Barnes, Marland and Schroeder, gives Turpin his five all-arounds.

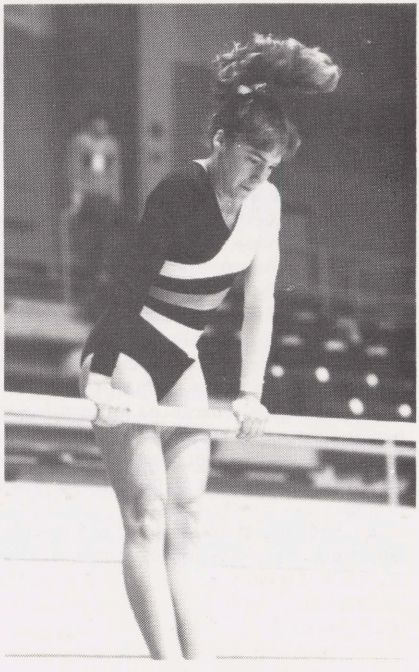
The rest of the help must come from the remaining rookie crop. Kristin and Karin Nakano come to OSU from the same club that produced Gabiola in Boise, Idaho but both have been limited in workouts because of injury. Amy Smidt has solid potential as well but has been hampered by shoulder and stomach problems. The final freshman is Lisa Treciak and she too has seen limited action in the gym because of injury.

"Consistency is the main thing we need and we can't get consistent until we get healthy," sighs Turpin. "Only four gymnasts have worked every day in preseason. Our goal on the year is to get the gymnasts on the floor and put them through 24 routines and hit 24 times. The wins and the places take care of themselves."

So the Beavers ready themselves for another top schedule that will help when OSU must peak at the end of the season. The NorPac schedule includes Washington, which should be one of the top teams nationally, and once again OSU will see the likes of Cal State-Fullerton, Brigham Young, Florida and Utah State as the season progresses. The Beavers also host the Shanico Inn-Vitational in February with the Huskies and CSU-Fullerton included in the lineup. The Beavers will get the NCAA Western Regional Meet as well for a second straight year, in April.

And if the bad news situation doesn't worsen, there will likely be plenty of good news by the time seeding for the NCAA National Championships rolls around.

Carol Schroeder



Debbie Marland

TINA BARNES, 5-1, 19, So., All-Around, Seattle, Washington (Blanchet)

Tina begins her second season at OSU and has already established herself as one of the best ever performers in Beaver history. The talented sophomore is coming off a banner season her freshman year. Tina gained All-American honors as a rookie for the Beavers, placing fourth in vault at the NCAA National Championships in Salt Lake City last April. She scored a 9.350 in the finals to gain the All-American honors.

Barnes provided several of the top vault scores in Beaver history as a freshman, including a 9.65, the second best score ever at OSU in vault. She averaged 9.4 on the season in her specialty and won the NorPac Conference vault title as well.

Barnes had a season best 37.45 all-around score (one of OSU's top 10 all-around scores) and was named the NorPac Freshman of the Year for her season efforts.

Prior to joining the Beavers, Barnes had an outstanding club career for the Northwest Aerials of Kirkland, Washington. She was a three time Washington State Class 1 all-around champion and won the 1982 Northwest Regional all-around title as well.

OSU All-Americans

Linda Parker

Mary Ayotte

Laurie Carter

LINDA PARKER

OSU's first All-American, Linda now coaches for the Beaver team. She earned All-America honors in both 1978 and 1980. The talented Beaver performer overcame several key injuries during her career to place at Nationals in floor and on beam. She was fourth on floor in '78 and seventh on beam in '80. Parker was also a three-time All Western Regional selection.

MARY AYOTTE

Perhaps the most honored of all OSU gymnasts, Mary was a two-time All-American out of Gresham, Oregon. She was the second Beaver to win a National Championship with her floor exercise title in 1982 and was the third place finisher all-around. She won her first All-America award in 1981 when she finished fourth on beam.

LAURIE CARTER

One of the most popular of all Beaver gymnasts, Laurie Carter was OSU's first national champion in 1981 when she won her specialty, the balance beam. Carter went on to set the standards for which collegiate beam scores have been based with a 9.9 in 1983. She went on to a fifth place finish at nationals that year and capped her outstanding career with an eighth place finish in 1984.

HEIDI ANDERSON

Heidi has won All-America honors at two schools. She first gained recognition at Penn State where she battled Mary Ayotte for the all-around crown in 1982. She won the floor title in 1981 and after transferring to OSU proved her versatility by claiming the national beam title. She added a third place beam performance to her list of accomplishments last year.

TINA BARNES

Freshman Tina Barnes became Oregon State's fifth All-American in 1985 when she placed fourth overall at the NCAA National Championships in vaulting. Barnes, out of Seattle, had a banner year in her rookie season with the Beavers averaging better than 9.4 on vault, recording a 37.45 high all-around score (one of the best ever by an OSU freshman) and being named NorPac Conference Newcomer of the Year for her efforts.
