

GAD-FLY

Just a bit of reminiscing from last year in this issue.

I recall an article or column about the pretty little men in the white high school lettermen sweaters with the small patch of blue. First, where are these elite Men? Years previous even the athletes in the organization wore their status symbol on Wednesdays. Where are these members who are so mysterious? Did I say mysterious--you bet. Ask one of the members what the goals of the organization are or what actions might come about through this organization. I'll venture if you ask one of the unknown members before Wednesday he'll be just a bit flustered.

Past years also it seems to me had a bit more equal representation from all parts of the campus. This year the north side predominates the group. Could this lead to poor campus relations from the most honored?

One of the elite on campus may have to eat some words. Editor Filthy used half of his column this week to deride "People with patches", making sure to let everyone know that he wasn't among them and then was tapped by the elite the night before the column appeared. I suppose he'll be glad to show off the patch along with the rest.

Maybe someday someone will have the nerve to stand up for what they believe about non-functioning elite groups.
