took him years to complete. Meanwhile he was still working at the Anderson ranches for wages. Fred moved between the main ranch at Jordan Valley, the Buffalo ranch and Hoppin' ranch at McDermitt and the Crooked Creek ranch.

It was at the Buffalo ranch in 1914 that daughter Myra was born. A Federal nurse came from the Indian Reservation to deliver the baby. On St. Patrick's Day 1917 at their ranch another baby, Mabel, arrived.

They were accumulating horses, sheep, chickens, and the girls were growing; this brought them more and more to the river at Rome. Josephine stayed at the Skinner place and sent the girls to the Rock House School.

Tragedy struck when Myra was twelve years old and going to school in Jordan Valley. She bumped her head at recess. Doctor Jones ordered her taken to hospital where she died four days later. Spinal meningitis was not successfully treated in those days. This was 1926.

In 1927 they were living at Rome and purchased the ranch from McDonalds. Again Fred was confronted with problem of water for irrigation. Three miles above Rome at the mouth of Owyhee River Canyon is Fred Scott's Dam. He built it to divert water into the hand-dug canal, thus began the yearly challenge to keep water in the Happy Valley Ditch.

In 1934, quite by surprise, another baby girl, Beverly Ann, was born delivered in Jordan Valley by Dr. Jones.

Fred and Josephine upheld 54 years of marriage, they endured the death of a daughter, encountered droughts, floods, range fires and a rabbit plague, murder in a cabin they had rented out, were held at gun point and beaten by robbers once, saw the building of the bridge across the river, saw electricity, telephones and television come to Rome.

They left to their family and to Malheur County a very rich heritage. Submitted by Pam White

OSCAR W. SCOTT

Oscar White Scott was born September 24, 1826; died September 30, 1889. He was born in Greene County, Illinois, being the fourth child of John Wharton Scott and Margaret White Scott. He received his education in the common schools of his birthplace.

On June 21, 1847, he entered Co. "D", Sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, for service in the Mexican War, where he served until peace was declared. He was discharged July 20, 1848, at Alton, Illinois.

After his discharge from the army, he was issued a license to keep a grocery store in Carrollton, Illinois.

On April 2, 1852, he was married to Elizabeth Green Logan, who was born August 19, 1832. Their children, all born in California, were: William J., born December 23, 1852, at Angels Camp, California; Edgar W., born August 17, 1854; Frank, born April 3, 1856. They lost: Flora, born January 3, 1858; Arthur H., born May 20, 1859; and Blanch and Florence (twins), born August 14, 1861.

Oscar and his wife left Illinois for California on April 1, 1852. At St. Joe, Missouri, a company was made up of three ox-wagons and seventeen men. They made the trip in the short space of one hundred and five days. They came by the Fort Kearney, Fort Laramie and Canyon route. They entered the state of California at Volcano, Amador County, where Mr. Scott began mining, and remained there until the fall of 1856. In 1857 he moved to Healdsburg, where he lived until September 1858, then he went to Point Arena, Mendocino County, and engaged in farming and stock raising. He spent 1861 and 1862 in the Nevada Silver Mines and then returned to Point Arena where his wife, Elizabeth, died November 16, 1865.

In 1866 he moved to Bridgeport, California, and then in 1867 he moved to Cuffey's Cove. He erected the first blacksmith shop there, which he sold in 1870 and returned to Mendocino County and farmed until 1878.

Joaquin Miller, the well known poet, journalist and frontiersman, was a friend and frequent visitor of Oscar W. Scott.

On July 4, 1868, he married his second wife, Mrs. Carolina Elizabeth Vines, a native of Tennessee, born January 31, 1833; the widow of Solomon Vines. Her maiden name was Caroline Elizabeth Buster (some records show it as Elizabeth Carolina Buster). She had two children by her first marriage who were: Francis M. (Frank), born Jan. 21, 1860; and Hattie, born June 11, 1861. There were no children by her marriage to Oscar.

Oscar, his wife Caroline, and family, came to Oregon from Mendocino County in 1878, and settled in Malheur County near Dell on lower Willow Creek. William J., Oscar's eldest son, also homesteaded near there.

In 1880 Mr. Scott opened a small store at "The Siding", which would later become Ontario. A Mr. J.A. Morton, who had a homestead near there, circulated a petition to secure a postoffice that was established in the Scott store, with O.W. Scott as postmaster. The name of The Siding was changed to Morton(ville) in honor of the pioneer Joseph A. Morton. The Morton(ville) postoffice was established May 6, 1884, and discontinued December 2, 1884.

In 1884, Oscar W. Scott erected one of Ontario's first buildings, the two-story Railroad Hotel, located on Oregon Street near Nevada Street (now 3rd Avenue). The two-story frame building was constructed by Dan Purcell, with his brothers-in-law, J.A. Draper and W.J. Mink.

The Hotel was opened on Thanksgiving Day, 1884, with a grand celebration and ball at which the Caldwell Brass Band furnished the music. A large throng attended the occasion, coming from fifty miles and more by buggy, horseback and on foot.

The postoffice moved into the hotel lobby. The building it had occupied was moved to the rear of the hotel. Oscar W. Scott became the third postmaster of Ontario, December 4, 1884.

Oscar built a one-story building adjoining his hotel on the north in which his step-son, Frank M. Vines, conducted a saloon. He also built a small store building next to his saloon into which the Duffy Brothers moved a drug store.

The Railroad Hotel and seven other buildings were destroyed by fire early on the morning of October 5, 1889. This was Ontario's first serious fire.

When Mr. Scott underwent the amputation of one of his legs below the knee, he leased the hotel and saloon to his eldest son, William J. Scott. Because of his ill health, he was forced to resign as postmaster.

Mr. Oscar W. Scott died September 30, 1889, at Ontario, Oregon.

The American flag for the first Fourth of July celebration in 1886, was made by Mrs. Oscar W. Scott and three other ladies.

After her husband's death Mrs. Caroline Scott made her home with her son, Frank M. Vines and family, in Vale, Oregon. She died October 18, 1919, and rests beside her husband in the Evergreen Cemetery, Ontario, Oregon. Submitted by La Neva E. Scott Shephard

WILLIAM J. SCOTT

William J. Scott was born December 23, 1852, at Angels Camp, California. He was the oldest son of Oscar W. Scott and Elizabeth Logan Scott, who had come to California from Greene County, Illinois, by ox-team. In 1858 his father engaged in farming in Mendocino County, California.

William J. Scott

William J. Scott married Idella Titus, a native of Kansas, on September 3, 1874, at Point Arena, Medocino County, California.

In 1878 the Scotts came to lower Willow Creek where Mr. Scott took up a homestead near Dell and engaged in farming and stock raising. He later increased his land holdings by purchasing 200 acres. In 1881 he planted the first alfalfa on Willow Creek and produced 600 tons of alfalfa each year. He also stretched the first wire fence in the county. William also had several thousand head of sheep and sold 14,730 clips of wool at the Ontario wool sale on June 23, 1902.

In 1888, due to his father's ill health, he leased the Railroad Hotel in Ontario and moved his family there. Later, Wm. J. Scott retired from the hotel business and returned to his Willow Creek farm to again engage in farming and stock raising. He had a good two-story six-room house, large barns and a good orchard. Mr. Scott noted that when he came here, his possessions were one horse, one mule, and an old pack saddle.

The Scotts were the parents of six children. The first child, Mary E., died young. The second daughter, Florence Lorena, wife of Burl Jones, later Lundstrum, was born July 27, 1878. The four sons were: Fredrick F., born July 10, 1881; Winfield W., born June 30, 1884; Herbert Harry, born June 11, 1889; and Russell Arthur, born Nov. 11, 1891.

Mrs. Idella Scott was called by death on August 12, 1893.

In Huntington, Oregon, on January 12, 1896, Mr. Scott married his second wife, Mrs. Nancy (Bonee) Murphy, who was born June 19, 1852, and was from San Louis Obispo County, California. She died November 15, 1919.

Wm. J. later married Adelaide (Addie) Wilkin of Portland, Oregon, on February 16, 1922, at Payette, Idaho. Addie was born Jan. 1, 1858, and died July 4, 1926.

William J. Scott was postmaster for Dell for a number of years, and was elected County Commissioner on the Republican ticket. He was a member of the I.O.O.F. in Ontario.

Horse racing was the principal sport in the old days. The first race meet in the county took place at Ontario in the fall of 1888. "Mormon Boy", owned by Wm. J. Scott, was one of the fastest of the local race horses.

Mr. Scott was a capable and upright man and had done much for the advancement of the country.

William J. Scott died at Vale, Oregon, on August 24, 1927, and is buried in the family plot of the Dell Cemetery near Jamieson, Oregon. Submitted by La Neva Scott Shephard

HERBERT H. SCOTT

Herbert Harry Scott was born June 11, 1889, in Malheur County, Oregon. He was the fifth child of William J. Scott and Idella Titus Scott, who had homesteaded on Willow Creek near Dell in Malheur County. He was a grandson of Oscar W. Scott.

Herbert H. and Myrtle (Powell) Scott

"Herb" had many occupations during his lifetime. He worked as a buckaroo on the Steens Mountain for the "P" Ranch for some time, drove freight wagons between Vale and Burns, broke and trained horses, herded sheep, worked as a hired hand, managed and cooked in a restaurant in Ontario, did placer mining and worked in sawmills. He worked at whatever was available, paid his bills, raised his family, and always did more than he was paid to do, and lived up to his word.

Mr. Scott was well known for his talent on the guitar and harmonica as he played for barn and house dances over the Eastern Oregon area.

As a young man he traveled to the state of Washington in 1912 where he homesteaded a farm on Ellemeham Mountain near Oroville, Washington, in Okanogan County. He cleared the land, planted wheat and alfalfa, had a few dairy cows and a large garden. He also built a small house and a barn.

Herbert now sent for a young lady whom he had met and courted while he was in the Durkee, Oregon, area; namely Myrtle Florence Powell, who was born April 27, 1895, near Durkee, the daughter of John Fremont Powell and Florence Boyer Powell.

Herbert H. Scott married Myrtle Florence Powell at Oroville, Wash., on August 26, 1914. They were the parents of two children: La Neva Evelyn, born July 10, 1915; and William Hubert, born December 25, 1916. Both children were born on the ranch at Oroville, Washington.

Several years later, Mr. Scott sold the ranch and moved his family to Baker, Oregon, where he was employed by the Baker County School District in 1923 and 1924. He also worked in the sawmills, including the Oregon Lumber Co. at Austin and Bates, Oregon, from 1927-29.

With the death of his father, Herbert became the recipient of one hundred and eighty acres of the ranch on Willow Creek above Vale, which he leased to a local farmer.

In 1936, Mr. Scott bought the family home at 2444 Grove St., Baker, Oregon, in which he remained until his death.

The Eastern Oregon mountains were his favorite hunting and fishing grounds. Being an excellent outdoorsman, he always bagged his deer and elk during the hunting season.

Due to ill health, Herbert retired from the Baker City Street Dept. where he had worked for a number of years.

His wife, Myrtle, died February 17, 1950.

Herbert H. Scott was an active member of the Democratic party and fought for the high Hell's Canyon Dam, which would have been built by the government. He is named in the Congressional Record dated May 27, 1953, in which a copy of his letter to the Interior Sub-Committee is printed therein in the support of public power and the benefits it would provide the Northwest.

Herbert H. Scott died August 4, 1956, and is buried beside his wife in the Mount Hope Cemetery in Baker, Oregon. Submitted by La Neva Shephard

WILLIAM H. SCOTT

William Hubert Scott was born December 25, 1916, in Okanogan County, Washington, on his father's homestead which was about three miles from the Canadian border and near the city of Oroville, Washington. William H. is the son of Herbert H. Scott and Myrtle Powell Scott, and the great-grandson of Oscar W. Scott, pioneer of Malheur County. He has a sister, La Neva Scott Shephard.

William's father moved the family from Washington to Baker, Oregon, in 1923. William received his schooling in Baker except for about three years at Bates and Austin, Oregon. He graduated from Baker High School in 1936. As a boy he sold newspapers and also worked as a Western Union delivery boy while in high school.

William H. Scott married Loyce Bonnie Branaman at Weiser, Idaho, on November 28, 1941. Loyce Bonnie is the daughter of Clarence Ulysses Branaman and Gertrude Mae Branaman.

They are the parents of five children: Darrell William, born August 5, 1942; Loyce Dianna, born February 19, 1944; Patricia Maryaleen, born March 10, 1945; Gloria Jo, born August 6, 1949; and David Herbert, born June 19, 1955.

ber 23, 1942, at Portland, Oregon, and was assigned to the Pasco, Washington, Naval Air Station. Later, he was sent to Okinawa where he served as an Aviation Machinist's Mate Third Class during the Japanese invasion. He received the following medals: The Asiatic Pacific Campaign Medal, the American Area Campaign Medal, the World War II Victory Medal, and the Good Conduct Medal. He was discharged from the service November 17, 1945.

During the years from 1938 to 1954, he worked at several lumber companies in Baker and Bates, Oregon, except while in the Navy. The years from 1944-1952, he worked for the Morrison Electric Co. of Nyssa, Oregon.

After the death of his father, Herbert H. Scott, William moved his family to the ranch on Willow Creek above Vale, Oregon, where he farmed from 1957 to 1973. The ranch is part of the original homestead of his grandfather, William J. Scott.

In 1973 he leased the ranch and moved to Ontario, Oregon, where he was employed by the Ontario School District from 1972 to 1977. He then joined his wife, Bonnie, in operating a Second-Hand Store which she had begun in 1973. They operated the store until 1980, at which time they retired and moved to Sumpter, Oregon, where they presently live.

Both William and Bonnie have a special interest in hunting, fishing and mining and enjoy the Eastern Oregon Mountains.

William's hobby is collecting guns and he has a very impressive collection. His wife, Bonnie, collects Ruby glass and has a large array of antique glassware and many other interesting antique items. Submitted by La Neva Scott Shephard

LA NEVA AND WALLACE SHEPHARD

La Neva and Wallace are both descendants of Pioneer families from Malheur and Baker Counties.

The marriage of La Neva E. Scott and Wallace D. Shephard was performed in the Christian Church at Klamath Falls, Ore. on June 20, 1937. Both were raised in Baker, Oregon. Wallace was born in Baker on November 13, 1918. La Neva came to Baker with her parents as a small child from Oroville, Washington, where she was born on July 10, 1915, on her father's homestead in Okanogan County, Washington.

Five children were born to this marriage: Sharon La Neva, born October 4, 1939; Wallace Scott, born February 15, 1943; Carolyn Elsie, born June 30, 1944; Delbert Harry, born Janu-also estimated that about three hundred cars of fruit were shipped from Brogan and Jamieson in one season. General farming also produced satisfactory returns and the raising of cattle and horses continued on the range, which was the main business in this area before the building of the irrigation project. For the next few years Brogan was the principal stock shipping point in the county.

Brogan and Jamieson both became prosperous communities. The annual peach blossom festival was attended by hundreds of guests who came to Brogan from Ontario, Vale and other localities in special trains and other conveyances. In 1917, a community hall was built at Brogan by donation of funds and labor to become the meeting place of the blossom festivals which were attended by many Malheur county residents annually.

Beginning about 1918, just as the fruit and other crop productions were at their highest, a shortage of water occurred under the Willow river project, which again caused litigation in the courts. This time litigations were between the settlers under the project and the water company. Law suits continued in the courts for the next seven years, which finally resulted in a decision by the state supreme court wherein it was declared there had been too much land developed for the available supply of water under the project, and the land to be supplied was materially reduced. Vested water rights were reduced from the approximate 50,000 acres originally included under the system to about 5,000 acres. The decision of the court apparently was justified, as drouth conditions brought on by water shortage, caused an almost total loss in the orchard district and resulted in the abandonment of cultivation of many fine farms that had once flourished under the project promoted by D. M. Brogan.

The first peach orchard in the county was planted by the well-known early-day pioneer, Joshua L. Cole, on his ranch later owned by his son, Emory Cole, in the vicinity of Dell. Mr. Cole marketed his peaches in the mining camps of that day.

Mrs. Nella Cole Wilks, who now resides with her husband, Roy Wilks in Long Beach, California, is a granddaughter of the late Joshua L. Cole. She was born on lower Willow creek near the old Dell postoffice in 1890, the daughter of Leonard and Hester Bond Cole. Mrs. Wilks is a niece of Mrs. Elizabeth Butler, a prominent pioneer lady of Ontario.

The Dell postoffice was established on the J. L. Cole ranch on lower Willow creek about 1880. William J. Scott was among the first postmasters. He was a son of Oscar Scott, first postmaster of Ontario. It is said the Dell postoffice took its name from the dell or dale in which it was located. I have also been told it was named for W. J. Smott's wife, Idella, who was called Dell by her friends.

law, D. C. Boyd, the Ontario Argus, a weekly Republican newspaper, which they handle with credit to themselves, it being a sheet of distinct vitality and merit and fearless in championing the principles of right and progress. In 1888 Mr. Clement was elected the first county judge of Malheur county on the Democratic ticket and for four years he served with ability and in such manner that all were satisfied and approved his wise and faithful course. Formerly he had served as justice of the peace.

In fraternal relations the Judge is popularly allied, being a member of the I. O. O. F., Ontario Lodge, No. 90, and past grand, also, having been representative to the grand lodge a couple of times and is also elected to the same position for this year; he is also a member of the Encampment of Ontario, No. 45, and is the present scribe; and is a member of the Rebekahs. The marriage of Judge Clement and Mrs. Emma Hall, the first white child born in Layton, Michigan, was solemnized on December 25, 1884, and the family home is one of the most palatial and comely residences in eastern Oregon, being situated in lovely grounds, which partake of the practical, having fine gardens and orchards, and also of the beautiful and decorative, being tastily and skillfully laid out and handled. This lovely home is one of refined hospitality, and with graciousness it is presided over by Mrs. Clement. In addition, the Judge has much other valuable property. It would not be fitting to close this brief article without referring to the pleasant fact that Judge Clement is a member of the Congregational church, and for nine years was superintendent of the Sunday-school, and in all that period he missed his accustomed place at the head of the school but nine Sundays. He is a man of ability, integrity, and is happily possessed of an amiable nature and an affability that have won him hosts of friends from all classes, and he is highly respected.

WILLIAM J. SCOTT.—The doughty pioneer of whom we now have the privilege of speaking, is one of the well known and progressive stockmen of Malheur county, having his family residence and home place about six miles south from Dell, where he manages a mammoth establishment of hay producing land and large bands of stock, being the man who enjoys the distinction of sowing the first alfalfa in the entire county, thus being the means of introducing this wealth-producing plant in our midst. Mr. Scott was born in Angels Camp, Calaveras county, California, on December 23, 1852, his parents being Oscar W. and Elizabeth (Logan) Scott, who came direct to that place from Greene county, Illinois, making the trip with ox teams. It is of note that the well known Joaquin Miller was a guest of the father of our subject for some time. In 1857 the family went to Healdsburg, California, and the following year they went to Mendocino county on the coast and there they farmed until 1878. There, also, on September 3, 1874, Mr. Scott married Miss Idella Titus. In 1878 Mr. Scott came to this country, taking a portion of his present estate as a homestead and began the good work of improvement and raising stock. He added two hundred acres of land by purchase and now has a farm that produces six hundred tons of alfalfa each year. In addition to introducing alfalfa in 1881 he also at that time stretched the first wire fence in the county. The farm is well supplied with water from Willow creek and in addition to this fine holding, Mr. Scott has several thousand head of sheep, and also cattle and horses. He has a good six-room dwelling, large barns and good orchard. When he came here he notes his possessions as one horse, one mule, and an old pack saddle. The children born to Mr. Scott and his first wife are, Mary A., deceased; Florence L., wife of B. Jones; Frederick F., Winfield, Harry H., Russell. On August 12, 1893, Mrs. Scott was called from her home and family by death.

On January 12, 1896, Mr. Scott married a second time, the lady of his choice on this occasion being Mrs. Nancy (Bonee) Murphey, who has by her first husband three children, as follows: Harry H. Howard, married to Bertha McCabe; George Howard, married to Bessie Rainey; Newell Howard. The second husband of Mrs. Scott died without issue. The first one was named Marshall Howard. Mr. Scott is a member of the I. O. O. F. in Ontario. He is a capable and upright man and has done much for the advancement of the country and is justly entitled to the approval and confidence of his fellows, which he enjoys in unstinted measure.
