Dear Mrs. Scharf:

I almost hate to write you this letter, but have finally mustered up courage enough to do so. You will probably recall the last minute commotion that I caused with regard to obtaining the Century Farm Certificates for myself and my cousin, Earl Reeder.

After receiving our Certificates at the fairgrounds, we tromped around the grounds until about 5:30, placed the folders in the back of the car, and came home; upon our arrival found that we had both of the folders but only one Certificate, apparently one of them having slipped from the folder at the fairgrounds.

We contacted the fairgrounds the next day in the hopes that it might have been turned in, and we have written to many of the exhibitors in the cattle barn where we spent most of our time in the hopes that possibly someone had picked it up and preserved it. Since nearly two months has now gone by, it appears there is no hope of the same being returned to us, and I am therefore inquiring of the possibility of obtaining another one. I would not want to cast upon you the burden of obtaining the signatures necessary, but would be happy to do so myself.

If this cannot be done, I guess that Earl and I will just have to flip a coin to determine who is to have permanent possession of the one certificate we do have as we carried them jointly throughout the day.

While I am writing, I do want to thank you for the special effort you put in in obtaining these for us in the first place.

Very truly yours,

Paul M. Reeder

Dear Mr. Reeder:

It is my turn to be embarrassed to write to you. On receipt of your letter of October 29, we had a duplicate Century Farm Certificate made for you. Somehow, I misplaced it and it was filed among a few unclaimed and incorrect certificates. Only last week did the error come to my attention.

I hope you will excuse my carelessness, and we certainly appreciate your interest and participation in the Oregon Historical Society.
